

Paolo P. Talento

“Whatever ought to be, can be.” (James Rouse)

Kenley Earl T. Tan

Fire: When my passion bursted out of my inner fear of being out of place.
Water: When I had to go with the flow and learned to let go.
Earth: When I found myself grounded in what truly mattered.
Air: When I thought it was over, but found out I could still go further.