

MINOR IN MANAGEMENT

Stephanie Nicole S. Reyes

Looking back, it is hard to believe how my time in the Ateneo has transformed me in ways I did not expect. The time I spent in college was an irreplaceable experience filled with laughter, tears, disappointments, and triumphs. But when all is said and done, there is no doubt that what I will treasure the most when I reminisce about these four wonderful years are the people whom I have shared my college experience with and all the valuable life lessons I've learned.

Angela Fe T. Rivera

If there's one thing I've learned in my college journey, it's the reality of failure. Although painful, such failures and detours, for reasons divine in nature, have tested my faith, led me to amazing people, allowed me to breathe life in ways unimaginable, and served as opportunities for the power of God to permeate through the portions of my heart bereft of hope. This rugged path has broken me, reconfigured me and ultimately brought God the glory. I don't think I'd have it any other way.