

Daniel Francisco P. Del Rosario

Catechist, historian, and political analyst: a few words to describe myself. This journey has been a good one, but the road has only branched out. Life may be confusing, but with God's help, I will be able to see it through. I may have lost many things, like my old ideals, but I have gained a lot more—not just in facial hair and pounds, but in knowledge, from History, to Philosophy and Theology. Thank you very much for the memories fam!

My college life can be reduced to this particular principle: Life is pointless and we are only certain of death. That is why I am and how I was. This voyage leads to nowhere and everywhere at the same time.
For that, thank you, Ateneo.
