Of the many challenges along the way, I do not regret encountering a single one. There were times of uncertainty, when the end goal became muddled by fear and anxiety over things beyond my control. But ultimately, from where I stand now, I believe each challenge to have served a purpose, be it to test my resolve, expand my mindset, or for me to question myself on why I truly care about the causes I cherish. One thing stands true: I am ready for more.
