

Regine Anne A. Abundo

My journey was filled with adventure and boredom, successes and disappointments, good and bad, productivity and procrastination, stress and relief, plans and serendipity, companionship and estrangement. Yes, it may be frightening, but these things that seem to pull you in different directions are also the things that make you alive. I have learned to open up to the wonders of life. Thank you, Ateneo, for teaching me not only to be accepting of myself but also, more importantly, of others.

From first arriving here in Ateneo, you were already accomplished. But as the days went by, you were challenged to even greater heights. From joining organizations and holding positions, all those late nights of studying and rushing to beat a deadline, the high that you got from all your A's, to all the pain that you felt from less stellar ones – here's to overcoming them all and reaching the end of your Ateneo journey. You have become all the greater for it. (W. Lee)
