In less than four years, I never thought I'd meet such different people, learn life's greatest lessons, make the best of friends, feel the craziest whirlwind of emotions, and create the most unforgettable memories than all my other years combined. I've never invested, loved, and felt so much emotion for a group of people, an org, a test, a project, a dream, a person, and of course a place until Ateneo gave me a reason to, and I wouldn't want to be prepared for what's ahead of me any way else.

I've always been a fan of my comfort zone; but for the past four years, I don't think I can recall staying put in that zone for too long anymore. I've realized that what's certain in life are the uncertainties. What won't change is that there'll always be curveballs on our way, but what we can change is our responses to them. Life will always deal us a couple of bad cards, but it's up to us to play those cards the best we can. Thank you, Ateneo, for encouraging me to always give it all I've got.
