What started as a joke/insult during freshman year became the persona I kept for my entire college life. Far from being the real NoKor leader, I have grown to become my own version of the Supreme Leader – a gentle and reliable friend. Life in Ateneo has taught me that there will always be no Nuke-easy solution to criticism and problems, but there is always room for understanding and hard work.

Dear Mom, thank you for supporting all 5 of us on your own – I know it’s not easy. Thank you for watching my UAAP games even if I’m not always playing, for supporting me in my decision to quit football even if it meant losing my scholarship, for understanding that AJMA needs to come first, for buying huge orders of Kuya Kimchi, for sending me to Spain, for welcoming Jed into our family, and for everything else I’ve failed to mention, but will always remember. This one’s for you. We made it!
