College life is great. It might be challenging at times – or most of the time – but it is still great overall. I could say that during that time is when I genuinely discovered myself. It was not really a single event but rather a culmination of everything. This journey, including the people I encountered along the way, will serve as an excellent prelude to the rest of my life. My time in college served as a fantastic training ground for the future. All for the Glory of God! Cavs in 6.
