

MINOR IN CHINESE STUDIES

Himig S. Marcos

The boy who graduated from high school as a seagull loses the “s” and finally leaves college as an eagle! Picking up a few things here and there, he found a home in the blue university along Katipunan. He learned to love, to hurt, and to love again with all of his heart. He will forever cherish the four great years filled with greater inspirations and the greatest memories. As he goes up the hill, this boy-turned-man for others wishes to thank everyone for shaping who he is today.

Michael L. Maribbay

I entered college with an intention to focus on chemistry. I’m graduating with an intention to focus on finance. Ano na? Looking through my years in college, I’ve realized a few things: Coffee is life, the unlikely people you meet will become your closest friends, the world will ever always be ever-changing, and life is easy if you have people who will be with you always. To all my groupmates, blockmates, friends, and my significant other, thank you for making me the best version of me.