

MINOR IN JAPANESE STUDIES

Hannah Louise G. De Guzman

I was told God didn't like people who did not sleep, for he who does not sleep, does not have faith to leave it in His hands for the night; he does not hope in the Being that watches over all.

I must have been disliked countless times, then. And as many times as I betrayed hope, I also doubted myself. But doubt is indeed a bond that can be as powerful and as sustaining as certainty.

Many times I have second-guessed myself, but here I am graduating with nothing but hope and gratitude.

MINOR IN ECONOMICS

Mary Graziellynn J. De Guzman

"Grazie," the Italian word for thank you. The most appropriate nickname for a woman like this. Everyone that has met her knows that they don't just call her to say her name, but to express thanks for having met such a person – a person who actually listens, cares, and responds with kindness towards friends and even strangers. A lot of people would agree that they are very thankful for meeting Grazie. I know that I am.

Thank you! (JC)