Aimee Charis T. Ong

There's an adage that says, "life's storms prove the strength of our anchors." I couldn't agree more. There were times when I was pressured to go beyond what I thought was my best, times when I thought I lacked the courage and determination to weather through, but still I survived, exceeding my own expectations. If it weren't for these storms, I wouldn't have known the strength of my Anchor, firm and secure, the same yesterday, today, and forever. For this, I am very grateful. Thank You, Lord.

He inspires and lives in the moment, never letting an opportunity pass. He may not be the smartest Ateanean, or the most fashionable, but he has something that money can never buy – a heart of gold and a voice that encourages. He pushes those around him to be the best person they can be. Throughout his stay in Ateneo, he learned what it means to really communicate with people and balance commitment, and he will forever treasure the memories and companions he found here.
