

MINOR IN INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS

Kathleen Grace D. Calasanz

“What ifs” are unavoidable, and my greatest “what if” of college was pursuing an art course instead of management. But without me noticing it, that idea eventually disappeared. It doesn’t matter anymore, because what I chose then lead to who I am now, and no “what if” is worth trading these experiences and encounters for.
I am happy.

To work passionately towards what you believe in is to live your life with purpose.
Ateneo is where my life was infused with the vibrancy of meaning. I was pushed beyond my limits and exposed to greater heights that I never knew I could achieve. College is where I ventured outside my comfort zone and discovered what anchors me as an individual.
My passion is what grounds me, keeps me going, and will continue to give my life its purpose as I go down from the hill.
