One thing I picked up from college is that there are teachers everywhere, and my parents are the best ones I have had. They were there from the very start, teaching me how to find the winds, how to steer a heavy boat, how to brave the waves, and how to keep rowing on. Now, even as I sail to my next adventure and leave the dock on the high hill, I know they are there for me. Even as I sail on my own, I know that I can always find my way back because of them. Mom and Dad, thank you.
