Drive long enough on a highway, and you will reach a sign that reads, “freeway ends.” You’re twenty years old, and you have arrived at the end of this freeway. Now listen: you will never be here again. So look around. I know you’ve loved it here, but the freeway is ending. Out there is a brave new world, and this is your exit. You are kind-hearted, Panjee, but you are also brave. There is nothing in this world you are not worthy of, no happiness you cannot reach. (C. Palan)
